"Come, Christine, you are wanted; the town authorities are seeking you."

It was William, the blacksmith, who spoke. She took his hand, and together they walked through the street of the village, a large crowd of curious people and children joined them as they passed along. William was an old man, and Jacqueline, whose feet kept time with his to the sound of the rustic music on her bridal day, had long since passed away. No other identification was necessary: no other questions asked by the authorities; and the body of Pierre, the lost guide, was interred with due ceremonies, undreds flocked to the funeral of a man who had been dead forty years; preserved in his icy sarcophagus until the slow motion of the great glacier had gradually brought the lifeless, frozen body to the track of the chamois-hunter.

The following is from the pen of young student, formerly a resident of our town. We shall always be glad to receive contributions from the youth for their own column:]

This great diplomatist, orator and statesman was born in Quincy, Mass., on the 11th of July, 1767. He was the son of John Adams, one of the principal leaders in the Revolutionary war, and afterwards President of the United States! During the Revolution John Adams was sent by our feeble Government to negotiate with some of the European powers. John Quincy accompanied his father on this mission, and during this stay was placed in some of the best schools of Europe. His early knowledge of foreign institutions qualified him for the part he was destined to act. He began public life as secretary to his father, who was then on a foreign mission; he also began his public career before he had finished his studies; and on his return home, in the year 1785, he entered Cambridge University, and graduated there in 1788 He then commenced the study and practice of law. But this seemed to hamper him. He longed to be where his ability would be better appreciated. On his return to the United States he was sent to the Senate in 1803. St. Ann's Church for Deaf-Mutes in New York City.

REV. THOMAS GALLAUDET, D. D. RECTOR. 20th Anniversary Sermon, Oct. 6, 1872.

(Continued from our last.) On Christmas Day, 1853, it was our privilege to use the silver communion set resented to our church by Miss Jane Ward and her friends. We use the same sacred vessels to-day. In September, 1854, our parish was duly incorporated nder the legal title of "The Rector, hurchwardens and Vestrymen of St. Ann's Church for Deaf Mutes in the city of New York." The wardens were Messrs. Cyrus Curtis and Robert B. Minturn, and the Vestrymen, Messrs. P. M. Wetmore, B. R. Winthrop, R. Gracie, J. W. Underhill, C. A. Budd. States from entering into a Treaty of Alliance with France. Washington took and J. Jones, the last three being deafreceived into membership with the convention of this diocese. Soon after this we bought for $16.500 our lots upon the south side of Twentysixth street, between the Sixth and Seventh avenues, as the site for the future church buildings. We afterwards learned that though man proposes God disposes, and often leads us to results far beyond our most sanguine expectations. On the 1st of November, 1857, we bade farewell to the humble upper room where we had planted our very small was one of the principal Commissioners in grain of mustard seed, and began to hold our services in the lecture room of the pointed minister to the Court of St. James.

By a singular coincidence, we at the same time were of the Church, this parish would be worshipping directly under them in the vigorous and effective. Let us pray for small chapel. Little did we think that the Holy Spirit to lead us all in the way they were building for us. In the Spring of our duty as members of this parish. of 1858, Christ Church, under Rev. Mr. Wiley, exchanged property with the Bap- A Deaf and Dumb Man cut in the Cheek tist congregation worshipping at the S. E. corner of Fifth avenue and Thirty-fifth street. The Baptists remained here one year, and then sold to us the church, rectory, four lots and the organ and church fixtures for $70,000. This purchase was consummated in July, 1859, and our services commenced on the first Sunday in August. We soon sold our communicating by mute signs communicating by mute signs with Pierce. In the meantime we must meet the interest of $1,400 a year. Our beloved friend, Mr. George R. Jackson, late senior warden of this church, left us a legacy of $5,000, payable with interest three years after his death, which took place in September, 1870. We have received three legacies: from Mr. W. E. Sanders, $225.85; from Mrs. Sarah Talman, $5,000; and from Mr. Thomas Garner, $5,000. On the 1st of January, 1860, our font was presented to us by a young lady, specially interested in our mission to deaf-mutes. We have at other times received other articles from kind friends viz: chancel chairs, altar-cloth and alms-basin, furniure and pictures for the Sunday-school, &c. Some years ago, the Trustees of Greenwood cemetery deeded us a lot for

to the Church her consecrated property, which had been temporarily alienated.

did not ask in vain. From year to year we promptly met our interest and steadily reduced the mortgaged debt until it amounted to only $13,000. Last year,

The latter, our present assistant, is specially interested in deaf mutes by family associations, and is able to conduct the services for deaf mutes very acceptably. Since he has been with us he has been a great help and comfort to me in the various associations and duties of our parish life. In addition to the clergyman ciated with me, the Rev. Dr. Clerc and the Rev. Messrs, Pennell and Berry, be sides Mr. Samuel Adams, the deaf mute layman, who conducts the services in Baltimore. MEXICO INDEPENDENT.

The ctual demand for labor is evidently liminishing in Mexico. Who does not low that the inevitable result must be compel our mechanics and other layers to seek a livelihood in other and n'e promising localities? I state it as ruism, that, where the interests of laor languish, every other business department will stagnate. A community that undertakes to maintain itself by mutual trade, without giving prominence to the labor and producing element, will eventually devour itself; the sharpest trader will be the fortunate party; it will be like the Kilkenny cat conflict the cat that has the largest tail will be the only survivor.

The eventual condition of such a place may be illustrated by reference to the history of the man and wife who engaged in the business of tavern keeping, with themselves only as customers; they having but a single sixpence between them, found it necessary to alternate in bar-tending; the one that had the sixpence would be the buyer, and so the sixpence changed hands; but then, to keep the bit moving, the bar must change its occupant, and the other become the customer. This made the sixpence nimble, but when their stock was gone, they had only the old sixpence left; and the last one that occupied the bar was its fortunate possessor.

might, and would be, with proper encouragement, produced at home, by home mechanics, from whom the merchants could obtain them, if they desired that kind of trade, and thus encourage labor, increase the number of producers, and of course augment the number of consumers by calling into the place more mechanics, instead of driving out those we have.

In a former article the boot and shoe trade was particularized as a business which, if the stock were to be manufactured in our midst, would beget a new era in the business activities and material prosperity of the place. It is estimated, by those qualified to judge, that from fifty to one hundred workmen, over and above those already here, would be required to produce the quantity of boots and shoes taken out of the place by retail purchasers. Now, suppose our population to be increased by the ingress of that number of mechanics for the above-named purpose, there would be an immediate demand quence, the value of real estate would be enhanced; and further, as the number of consumers would be enlarged by the presence in the place of the supposed number of mechanics, many of whom would have families, there must be an increased demand for all necessary articles of food, clothing, etc.; so the trade of every class of merchants would be enmore ready market, not only for wholesaleing, but for retailing all their little loose parcels of produce; customers would be drawn in from a greater distance, and thus the area of the patronizing territory enlarged, and not only the village, but the names of subscribers for "The the community around would be ma- Children's Album." ere advocated. It may not be out of place to say few words touching another interest, hinted at in the previous article, and one that lies near to many hearts. I allude to our churches. We have five of them; a large number, it must be conceded, to be supported comfortably by our present population, especially by that portion of on New Year's Eve.

True, it is to the credit of Mexico that. perhaps as great a proportion of her inhabitants are church attendants as that of any other community; and yet the tax for supporting the Christian institutions amongst us, presses heavily on a few in the several churches. By inaugurating the very feasible economy proposed, material, so to speak, would be provided for the progressive enlargement of the membership and congregations of the several church organizations, and thereby, means for their more easy and permanent support would be made avail-

Let it not be disguised that, unless something turns up, similar to what is herein suggested, Mexico has reached its climax; all the church institutions must languish, or some of them subside, and all other general interests named, more or less decline

The following is the Argument of the Cantata: PART FIRST.

It is New Year's Eve. "Old Father Time' appears, to remind the "Old Year," who is still sitting on his throne, that his race is almost run, and, pointing to the lessening sands of his hour-glass, calls on him to give an account of the mo-ments which were alotted him. The "Old Year," in reply, summons the Four Seasons, and his twelve daughters, the Twelve months, to his presence, requesting them to answer for then "Spring," "Summer," "Autumn," and "Winter," attended by their sprites, and the different Months attended by their sprites, and the different Months they control, enter now, each in her turn, addressing "Father Time." After "Winter's" address, the "Old Year," in order to lengthen out his moments, asks "Father Time" to stay a little while longer, saying "the Four Seasons, with the twelve daughters, would entertain him with picture scenes from their experience." "Time" reluctantly consents, and the "Old Year" bids the Four Seasons and the Twelve Months go and prepare the entertainment. PART SECOND.

"Spring," attended by "Zephyr," and "Dew-cop," enters, and announces to "Time" that the drop," enters, and announces to "Time" that the picture is prepared for him, and bids her attend picture is prepared for him, and bids her attend-ants open the inner curtain, disclosing the Ta-bleau: "Crowning of the May Queen." As soon as the Chorus from the Tableau is ended, "Spring" and attendants retire. "Time," when asked by the "Old Year" if the scene has pleased him, replies, "that it is pretty, but wishes to know if sport is the end and aim of life."

"Summer," attended by "Sunshine" and "Rain-oy" now enters. At the command of "Summer," her attendants open the inner curtain, disclosing the Tableau; "A Summer Picnic." The "Old Year" again challenges the admiration of is guest, but "Time" replies, "that moments assed in slothful ease and enjoyment are not at

PART THIRD.

The Four Seasons, with their respective attendants, and the different Months they control, enter in slow procession, and as soon as all are in their proper positions, they sing a "Farewell Chorus" to the "Old Year." "Time" now requests the "Old Year" to yield his throne to his successor, who is, during this address, escorted to the stage by "Christmas" and "Santa Claus." The clock strikes twelve, at which moment "Time" removes the "Old Year" from the throne, places the "Young Year" on it and crowns him. "Time" and the "Old Year" now walk hand in hand slowly off the stage, while the remaining characters sing a "Welcome Chorus" to the "Young Year." the remaining characters sing a Chorus" to the "Young Year."

A Good Word for Our Serial Story.

FRIEND HUMPHRIES :- Some weeks since you asked me to listen to the reading of the opening chapters of your forthcoming story, "Charity Boston," and give you my opinion of it.

I had already been favored with the reading of the introductory chapters, and I felt that my friendship for the writer was such as almost to disqualify me from acting the part of an impartial critic; yet I believe I am not blinded by friendly motives in saying to you that you need have no concern in regard to the eception it will meet.

It is a story of village life, and the haracters are so naturally drawn, the soeiety to which we are introduced is so quaintances at each step. But, question : will such common incidents, will our own the form of a story ? Yes, at the point of seythes, shovels, forks, potato hooks and Miss Beebe's pen we can find ourselves other articles too numerous to mention interesting even to ourselves. Ham and eggs are not uncommon incidents to our table, but Mrs. Beach's ham and eggs, invested with her peculiar manner, and cooking, give forth an odor not forgotten with the passing meal. I believe that when your present subscribers have had as many chapters as I have now heard, they will begin to wish their friends to enjoy it with them, and back numbers will be in good demand. I sum up my opinion thus. Please place the name of my brother, Fayette Peck, Marshall, N. Y., on your list (to ommence with the story), and charge to account of Yours truly, D. W. C. PECK.

the lowest market price.

The first necessity is a large dish pan, not shallow, but high and roomy, with handles, such as may be found in any hardware. The next are clean soap and plenty of soft water. Scrape the dishes clean and put all you can into the pan at once, saucers, cups and silver on the top. Then lay on the soap and pour on the water until the pan is full. Of course it should not slop over as you work. It may be possible that very hot water will sometimes crack the glazing on the dishes, but we have discovered no such ill es, but we have discovered no such ill effects, though we have given the method a thorough trial, and we have known pieces that had been washed and rinsed as clean as possible in hard water, and grown to look grimy and unfit to be used, to brighten and whiten wonderfully under this treetment. der this treatment.

Such hot water, however, is not good for the hands, at least not comfortable, and, therefore, we recommend a swab with a flat handle, broader where the cloth is to go on, and with holes bored through so that it may be fastened se-curely. The handle should be everywhere smooth and have no angles to hurt the hand.

First wash the glass, which of course you have left out of the pan, and wipe immediately on a dry soft linen cloth. The theory, which we hope is worn out, that any rag of sufficient size will do for a dish towel, is a very poor one. Next wash and wipe the silver; that in daily use, cleaned in this manner, will need little other polishing. Some good housekeepers say wipe every dish as soon as it is washed, do not let it go from the hand, but we see no objection from the hand, but we see no objection to letting earthenware drain. It is certainly, more expeditions, require fewer towels, and we cannot see why the result is not satisfactory. Tin ware should not drain. We would not rinse for the reason that it is more work and nothing seems to be gained by it. Possibly it may be necessary towards the last, if the number of dishes is very great, but not ordinarily. Where so much water is used with sufficient soap, it does not get cold and foul. If it has many crumbs the dishes have not been scraped as they should be. If the pan will not hold all at once, those left out should be put in as fast as there is room.

Coffee.

We propose simply to furnish direc-tions by which an excellent cup of this aromatic infusion may be set by every plate at the breakfast table, and by which the roily, bitter, puckering concoction often passing under the name of coffee, may be banished from the eating-room. We have tried coffee pots of various patterns, the Heckla, the Old Dominion, the Eureka, and others, but have settled down, after all, on the old-fashioned big tin coffee-pot, with the white of an egg to clear the beverage. Every part of the process of coffee-making must be conductod with care if a perfect cup is expected. The selection comes first, for if the berry, to begin with, is of inferior quality only failure can be anticipated. The kinds most in use are Java and Rio, or South American coffee. The former is large, yellow, and entire, when of good quality; the latter smaller in size, and of a greenish tint. If coffee is drank for its tonic effects, and in a chilly, malarious country, Rio is best; if for its aroma and exhilarating qualities, Java should be selected. But appearances are deceitful, as we know by experience. Not long since we pur-chased a sack of "Old Government Java," beautiful to look upon, clean, golden, plump berries they were, and tried repeatedly, but in vain, to make good coffee. The parching and steeping were conducted with the utmost care, but a strong, bitter, sourish drink was all we could make of it. The truth was that the coffee had lain the hold of some vessel, and been steeped in the brine of old Boots and ocean, till the last particle of aroma was washed out. We sent it back, and procured a good article, and have had no complaints of the morning meal since .-The parching should be conducted slowly at first, to expel the moisture; when the berries are a light brown let the fire be increased, and the coffee remain over it until the oil in the berry is drawn by the heat to its surface, and the whole looks shining and of uniform color. Then remove it at once to a close vessel, and grind only as much at a time as is required to be used. Allow for each cup a heaping tablespoonful; put it into the coffee-pot, with the whole or part of the Custom Work done to order and in the white of an egg; add enough water to best style of workmanship. moisten the whole, stir all well together, and set on the stove till it is nearly at scalding heat, then pour on the boiling water, and let it boil two or three minutes. Remove from the fire and serve immediately. Two or three particulars must be carefully attended to. The old coffee and grounds must not stand in the coffee-pot, but as soon as breakfast is over let them be thrown out, the pot washed clean, scalded and dried. In Winter let the milk be boiled, and if a teaspoonful even of cream can be put in each cup, the infusion will be 50 percent better than with milk only. If any is left over let it be poured off from the grounds into a close earthen vessel, and when reheated it will be nearly as good as when fresh made. It is not claimed that better coffee than this cannot be made with Heckla's French drippers and other expensive patents; but we do say that by following the directions given above every family may have a clear, palatable, and excellent drink with comparatively very little trouble.—Tribune. EXCELLENT DRIED BEEF.—For 100 pounds of meat take two quarts of salt and 2 ounces of saltpetre. Heat these in a smooth iron kettle and then add molasses until the mass resembles brown sugar. Keep it over the fire, and with it rub the meat, piece by piece, on all sides, and pack immediately in a tub or jar. Turn the pieces over every other day. No water is needed. After ten days take out the meat, rinse very slightly and hang up to dry, where it will not freeze. Meat prepared in this way is very tender and has an excellent flavor.

It is an error to imagine that women talk more than men. They're listened to more—that's all.
